PROVIDENCIALES — Wymara Resort and Villas, Turks and Caicos this week announced that long-time Managing Director Bruce Maclaren, has purchased the shares of former co-owner Rob Ayer, with a long-term view to the future.

The news has a Canadian angle, as both Maclaren and Ayer are Canadians themselves.

To complete the transaction, Maclaren partnered with Sterling Global Financial as an equity investor. The transaction happens in the wake of a successful renovation and the completion of the first phase of the Wymara Villas.

Says Maclaren: “I have always been passionate about Wymara Resort and Villas and have been a hands-on Director for the past decade. I decided to increase my investment because of the enormous potential I see in our brand and our continued ability to deliver for our condo and villa owners.”

David Kosoy, Executive Chairman and Founder of equity investor Sterling Global Financial is enthusiastic about Maclaren’s vision for the future of Wymara. “We have worked with Bruce on projects in the Turks and Caicos and Bahamas since 2010 and have experienced first-hand his commitment to excellence and growth. We are happy to invest in the resort and support the management team in any way we can. We are also extremely bullish about Turks and Caicos as a destination and cannot think of a better partner in this market.”

The timing couldn’t be better, said Maclaren. “A few years ago, we made the bold decision to undertake a significant room renovation to lift our room product at the resort to match the design and standard of the Villas. Now, as travel roars back, we are welcoming guests to a virtually new hotel – one of the finest in Turks and Caicos and now a member of the Leading Hotels of the World.”

The property upholds a commitment to sustainability throughout its operations, he adds. Celebrity chef Andrew Mirosh was recruited all the way from Australia and brings a fresh approach to Wymara’s culinary offering. To top it all off, the resort also sits on “the very best stretch of Grace Bay Beach,” says Maclaren.

In addition to the Wymara Hotel product, the luxurious multi-million-dollar Wymara villas – one of which features a slide from the deck to the ocean – are setting international standards with their overwater swim platforms and steps leading to the bluest waters in the Caribbean. The newly opened sports club for the exclusive use of villa guests includes a lap pool, fully equipped gym, and lounging areas. Phase two of the villas is currently underway.

“This is an exciting time for Turks and Caicos, and we are thrilled to be part of it for decades to come,” says Maclaren.
